

AADHA AKASH &lt;the.great.conjunction.2020.12.21@gmail.com&gt;

HALF THE SKY: "There is something afoot in the universe, something that looks like gestation and birth.' In other words, a plan, a purpose ..."

1 message

Jagbir Singh <s.jagbir@gmail.com>
 To: AADHA AKASH <the.great.conjunction.2020.12.21@gmail.com>

"There is something afoot in the universe, something that looks like gestation and birth.' In other words, a plan, a purpose to it all." But we are all awakening to something beyond our wildest imaginations. I am awakening since my interaction with HALF THE SKY began last year. (June 4, 2021)

A CAPSTONE FOR JANE GOODALL

Thursday, May 20, 2021

PHOTOGRAPH BY CBS/GETTY IMAGES

By Rachael Bale, ANIMALS Executive Editor

Jane Goodall is hopeful.

The 87-year-old primatologist, conservationist, and Nat Geo Explorer has spent most of her life fighting to protect wildlife and nature from the cruelty and destruction of humans, yet Goodall, pictured above in 1965, has maintained an upbeat outlook that seems to defy reason. In her 2000 memoir, Reason for Hope: A Spiritual Journey, Goodall explored where that feeling comes from, with the help of religious scholar Phillip Berman:

"There are really only two ways, it seems to me, in which we can think about our existence here on Earth," she writes. "We either agree with Macbeth that life is nothing more than a 'tale told by an idiot,' a purposeless emergence of life-forms....Or we believe that, as Pierre Teilhard de Chardin put it, 'There is something afoot in the universe, something that looks like gestation and birth.' In other words, a plan, a purpose to it all."

For both her writings on spirituality and the effects that her groundbreaking chimpanzee discoveries had on how humans see themselves, Goodall today was awarded the 2021 Templeton Prize, a $1.5 million award that honors people whose scientific work sheds light on "the deepest questions of the universe and humankind's place and purpose within it." She joins the ranks of other Templeton laureates, who include the Dalai Lama, Archbishop Desmond Tutu, physicist Freeman Dyson, and other religious leaders, scientists, philosophers, and humanitarians.

Best known for her long-term field studies of chimpanzees in Tanzania's Gombe National Park, which began in 1960, Goodall and her studies of their personalities, family bonds, and rituals helped transform the public's view of animals. She discovered they use tools, wage war, form tight mother-baby bonds, and show compassion—more like humans than anyone had considered.

I encourage you to discover more about Jane Goodall, including:

- * Her 1963 article for National Geographic about the Gombe chimps.
- * A Q&A with Goodall on her 80th birthday
- * In Praise of Difficult Women: An excerpt from author Karen Karbo's book on 29 heroines who dared to break the rules.
- * How Jane Goodall changed what we know about chimps

Do you get this newsletter daily? If not, sign up here or forward to a friend.

---

June 1, 2021

Preya

Winter has been a little difficult for me during lockdown, I stopped feeling vibration and cool breeze.

Jagbir

Never feel any guilt of vibrations and cool breeze. You are past that Preya. We are leaving the Standard One Resurrection behind us and entering Standard Two Quantum Mechanics.

Shivali

Dear Jagbir we are really blessed to be a part of this group. Your words really lead us to the different world.

June 2, 2021

Jagbir

To be honest, Shivali, even I do not know where it is coming from since I am in a thoughtless state most of the time. For example, when I spontaneously responded to Shruti and wrote this: This is just a single drop in the River of Tears. (May 31, 2021)

I read it again and wondered: is the extermination of 215 indigenous children just a drop of a tear.

Then came more information that made me realize that 215 dead innocent souls are only a drop of tear. That information made me realize how little is known about the history of tears, and it was an eye-opener.

I am going to write about the River of Tears too as I am really saddened by humanity's shallowness or indifference. I don't think we know the meaning of tears is all I can say for now.

But we are all awakening to something beyond our wildest imaginations. I am awakening since my interaction with HALF THE SKY began last year.

That for me is so comforting as only the Divine Feminine can bring beauty and sanity and Love to the future world of womankind.

THE MOTHER has returned after 5000 years and the only way to praise HER is the supplication of Silence on Self! That, Shivali, will be an experience far better than vibrations and Cool Breeze.

And I really mean "far better" because You will learn to meditate 24/7. Thus, my Pranaam to You for giving me the opportunity to release a sacred secret!